

Coax Is A Killer

Ever cursed the inventor of coaxial connectors? Now you can make peace with even the hardest connections thanks to Revotech's nifty line of RJAX Snap-In Coax products. According to the company, the devices make connections of coaxial cable to TVs, VCRs, receivers, satellite equipment and set-top boxes a breeze—no matter how big your fingers are. Revotech also offers couplers, splitters, and wall plates.

Prices vary starting at $2.99.

Revotech Industries International, www.revotech.net.

Make Tracks...

WireTracks takes the headache out of new wiring needs with its wiring channels that can be easily installed on drywall, making any existing residence ready for upgrades anytime. The front panel of the baseboard channel snaps off for easy installation of new wiring technology.

Retail pricing is less than $2.50 per foot at $17.88 per 8' length or $11.88 per 5' length.

WireTracks, www.wiretracks.com.

A Universal View

Universal Electronics' Nevo is a connectivity solution that transforms any electronic display into a sophisticated, easy-to-use home control and automation device. With a Nevo-enabled ViewSonic "airpanel" Smart Display, users can connect, control and interact with their vast array of electronics and systems through a powerful, visual interface on a wireless touchscreen monitor.

Nevo with 10" ViewSonic model (V110), $799;

15" model (V150), $999.

Universal Electronics, www.mynevo.com.

